PREFACE

THE text of the Culla Niddesa (C.N.), as edited here, is based on the following sources:

Sᶜ: Palm-leaf MS. in Singhalese characters, from Colombo, the property of Prof. Rhys Davids;
Bʳ: Palm-leaf MS. in Burmese characters, in the Bernard Free Library, Rangoon.
T: The C.N. in the printed Siamese Tipiṭaka, vol. xxvii.

Of these sources the first one was accessible to me in its original form, having kindly been lent to me by Prof. Rhys Davids; of the second I had a transcript made by Mrs. E. Powell-Brown of Rangoon, by which I was greatly aided in checking and correcting Sᶜ; and the difficulty of reading the third in the original was overcome by a full transcript sent to me, like that of Bʳ, by Mrs. Rhys Davids.

Recognizing the great similarity between Sᶜ and Bʳ, I asked Mrs. Powell-Brown to discontinue her transcription after having done slightly more than half, but by some chance she continued up to leaf 63 (v. 1122 Sn.), covering thus the "suññato"-passage, which, being in a very confused state in Sᶜ and somewhat disarranged in T, receives a great deal of elucidation from Bʳ, so that I was glad after all to have the copy of Bʳ up to the point mentioned.

It is a pleasant duty to me to acknowledge the readiness of both Professor and Mrs. Rhys Davids to put this work into my hands as a "solamen misero" in these unfortunate times, and to give me what assistance they could. To Mrs. Rhys Davids I am also indebted for a good number of references concerning Gāthās and "vuttaṃ h' etaṃ" quotations. My thanks are further due to Mrs. Powell-Brown for the careful and painstaking transliteration of B^{r}, on which she has spent a good deal of her time, and which, considering the difficulties under which she worked, cannot be praised too highly. The Siamese transcript also was done in an excellent manner, which deserves full credit.

I am glad to have been able to bring to an end a piece of work, the successful completion of which was threatened more than once; and I hope that it will contribute its mite towards the advancement of Pāli studies and of Buddhist literature and philosophy. As regards the manner of treating the text and the form of its arrangement, I have to say a few words of justification, which I trust will meet with the approval of my fellow-workers.

W. STEDE.

INTRODUCTION

1. Character of this Edition.

The form of this edition needs some explanation. It is only after a long and careful consideration of the advisability or otherwise of a modified arrangement in the editing of a Pāli Text, that I have decided to depart from tradition.

The purpose of a Niddesa or Exposition is better served the more categorically the analysis of the matter to be elucidated is carried out. Thus its character finds its true expression in an arrangement which suits our purposes. The form must be such as facilitates to best advantage the exposition of the matter, and in want of any better, we have to take to the form of the dictionary, for in the end is not every dictionary a niddesa and every niddesa a dictionary ?

It might at first seem as if the context as such would suffer from a treatment of the exposition which severs the connective thread and dissolves it into its components. But on closer inspection it becomes clear that it is never, or only very seldom, the context as a whole which is explained, and that any thread in the pregnant sense of the word is only an apparent one. In reality the exposition is not an organic structure, but only an aggregate of disconnected pieces or atoms—each of them representing a stereotype phrase which serves for the word or words not only in this special setting, but in any setting. By virtue of this its stereotype and inorganic character, it does not make the slightest difference whether the atoms of the exposition are left in this setting, or be put into another setting more appropriate to our purpose. And indeed, by laying bare the structure of the exposition, the really important, because individual and therefore vital parts, are all the more easily recognized and appreciated as such.

It is this stereotypeness of all Commentary explanations which has led me to this arrangement of C.N. By this means we can hope to one day reduce the whole of our explanatory matter (and I daresay a good deal of our text-matter as well) to its simplest form, its nucleus, and trace it back to its common source. There can be no question as to the existence of this common source.

In view of this their character as stereotype explanations their value lies by no means in their "speciality," i.e., being an explanation of the passage to which they are appended, but rather in their "generality," as being a part of a greater Commentary-whole, bricks in a larger building, to the reconstruction of which the new arrangement will help to contribute.

Moreover, as the C.N. is traditionally considered to form only a continuation of the Mahā Niddesa (M.N.), and as the same explanations are repeated in C.N. which are given suis locis in the printed edition of M.N., this arrangement of the C.N. matter will at the same time prove to be a sort of passage-index to M.N., and instead of repeating the same matter in the same way, it will shed new light on it by showing it in a different way under a different angle of incidence.

An investigation of the relation between the MSS. of M.N. and those of C.N. would be of interest and importance. Their affinity is close, and to show their resemblance I have in a few cases added the M.N. reading to the vv. ll. of the C.N. passage (to the expositions of kāma, parissayā, visattikā, and sata).

Thus its setting into the modern form is, I believe, in no way an impairment of its character; it only exchanges its Eastern garb for a Western one, and gains in its value as analysis ("exposition") by a further improvement of it. A decided help derived from such a rearrangement is also that it facilitates the identification of the "pe" passages; and its aid to the study of Buddhist philosophical terminology cannot be underestimated by anyone who has ever undertaken such a study. The improved analysis must be welcomed by the student of Buddhist thought, for in all constructive science the analytical part has to precede the synthetical, and why should not the constitution of a Text prepare the way for synthesis as much as it can by analysis ?

2. The State of Sᶜ.

1. My main and only source for first-hand information was the Singhalese Palm-leaf MS. lent by Prof. Rhys Davids. I have transcribed and analysed its 101 leaves and found it to be a source of very doubtful value. It must be the work of a scribe who was not even familiar with the language he was copying. Besides being extremely badly written in parts, it is full of insertions at the wrong places, of omissions of letters and words, and of repetitions which altogether escaped unnoticed. It was a laborious task in itself to restore the right sequence of leaves in their original form from this MS. All the more reliable—because done without a thought and therefore free from intentional changes—it proved for the reconstruction of the Original (*SᶜA. conjectured) from which the writer of Sᶜ copied. The clue to this reconstruction is furnished by various passages, which by their position in Sᶜ point to a misplacement of the leaves in *SᶜA, and by several mistakes in leaf-turning, or when the back was copied before the face. An analysis of all these passages shows that *SᶜA was, or is, a Palm-leaf MS. consisting of 126 leaves[1], written like Sᶜ on both sides, but with seven or eight lines to each, whereas Sᶜ has from eight to ten lines. The reconstruction of *SᶜA was a purely arithmetical process which in its result proved to be correct to the line (cp. App. 3, constructed for Pār. V.).

[1] The first and the last of it are half-leaves; $1\text{-}92^{1\text{-}8}$ for Pār. V., and $92^{9\text{-}15}\text{-}126^{1\text{-}8}$ for the Kh.S. If both were kept separate, there would be ninety whole and two half-leaves for Pār. V., and thirty-three whole and two half-leaves for Kh.S.

2. This is not the place for entering on a full account of the wearisome "excavation" process of *S^{c}A, but as an illustration of the carelessness of S^{c} copyist the enumeration of the following passages might well serve, viz.—

Leaf 24_{15}-25_{10} (14 lines=*S^{c}A, leaf 27) is a verbatim repetition of 24_{1-14}.

After 27_{17} is a lacuna of five lines.

Leaf 39_{8-14} should be placed before 39_{1-7} (*S^{c}A 46 back before face).

Leaf 40_{14} is continued at 44_{8} (wrong position of *S^{c}A 55-58).

Leaf 43_{2-9} should precede 42_{13}-43_{1} (*S^{c}A 57 b > f).

Leaf 47_{13}-48_{2} should precede 47_{9-13} (in *S^{c}A 52).

Leaf 49_{11-18} should precede 49_{5-11} (*S^{c}A 54 b > f).

Leaf 49_{11} is continued at 40_{14} (wrong position of *S^{c}A 48-54).

Leaf 44_{7} is continued at 49_{19}.

Leaf 62 is in a hopeless confusion (*S^{c}A 74, 75; see suññato).

After 63_{9} is a lacuna of sixteen lines (=*S^{c}A 77)[1].

3. Other peculiarities (besides those to be mentioned sub c. 5) of this source are—

(a) A very frequent substitution of p for ph; ā for o, and vice versa; e for o; v for c; aṃ for ā; uncertainty whether saṃ° or pa°; a frequent mixing of h and s (°si > °hi, and vice versa; cp. Somaka ⩘ Hemaka, Pohāla ⩘ Posāla).

(b) The use of ṇ is thoroughly erratic. It seems as if the writer only becomes gradually acquainted, and even then only slightly familiar with this letter, for whereas in the

[1] The omission of *S^{c}A 77 seems to be not merely a blunder. Since the Pucchās (Sn. v. 1123) are concluded with *S^{c}A 78, these two leaves formed the end of the actual text, to which the following Prose- and Verse-parts are later additions; and thus through an interchange of 77 and 78, which could readily be made, the former one was lost (see also remarks ad c. 6, 3).

Text it is extremely rare, we find it in the Commentary very often wrongly applied, not only for n, but also for the letter t. There is no trace of it in the Vatthugāthās; in the text of the Pucchās it occurs only in 1034 (which part is missing in B^a), in 1080, 1081 (wrongly), in 1106-1108; in the Prose-part in 1126, 1146, 1147 (wrongly).

(c) In the text of the Pucchās (S^{cp}) our source has d for r only in Nos. 4 and 5; r for d only after No. 5; p for s (and vice versa) only after No. 4 (and in Commentary: S^{cn}): e.g. sabbadhi S^{cp}, but pabbadhi S^{cn}; y for s (and vice versa) only after No. 4.[1]

3. Text of C.N. and Text of Sn.

For the text-matter the readings of this edition agree with those of the Sutta Nipāta, as edited by Dines Andersen and Helmer Smith (PTS. 1913), in all cases where they are borne out by C.N. sources, as I have also kept the numbering of the Gāthās after Sn. General divergencies between C.N. and Sn. readings may be grouped as follows:—

A. The shortening of final ī (especially before a following initial s) and ū is so marked in C.N. that I have adopted the writing of C.N. MSS. in all following words:—

v. 997 āmantayi sisse [=B^{ai} C^b].
1015 nadati vane [=B^{ai} C^b].
1034 sabbadhi sotā [=B^{ai}].
1050 upadhi-nidānā.
1052 akittayi no; muni sādhu =[B^{ai} C^b].
1109-1115 nandi saṃyojane.
75 asuci manussā (cp. v.l. S^c jarasita for jarā sita : like assāda for āssāda, assama, kassapa, etc.).
1038 puthu idha (cp. 1043 puthu 'dha) [=B^{ai}] ahu throughout [=B^{ai} C^b].

---

[1] With this cp. the peculiar occurrence in B^{rp} of writing e for a only in Nos. 1 and 2; t for h only after No. 4; y for s only once in No. 16.

Similar cases for medial ī and ū, mostly due to disregard of metre, are :—

anūpadhika, Upasiva, satimā, mutimā; vidhuma (cp. neglect of metre also S^e 1077: ñāṇ' upapanna; 68: bal' upapanna; 1057: anupadhika).

B. Since all our sources are based on Bu tradition, I have accepted the Bu writing for byā° (Sn. vyā°; cp. C.N. viyā°) and kkh (Sn. kh) throughout, except in sekha (cp. also c. 8, 2).

C. In opposition, though not always in preference, to Sn. readings, I have substituted in the text the following vv. ll. of my sources :—

977 Mulakassa B^r S^e T B^l (> Alakassa), cp. 1011.
992 upadhikkhaye B^r S^e T B^{aim} (> upadhisaṃkhaye).
997 āmantayi B^r S^e T C^b B^{at} (> °ī) (cp. B).
998 svajja B^r S^e (> svājja).
1000 byakkhātā B^r S^e (> vyākhyātā).
1001 dve yeva B^r S^e B^{aim} (> dve va).
1002 āvasati B^r S^e T B^{at} (> ajjhāvasati).
1003 vivaṭacchado B^r S^e T B^{im} (> vivattacchaddo) (cp. 1147).
1031 pañjalī B^r S^e C^b B^{im} (> pañjali).
1036 cā pi B^r S^e T (> ca).
1045 kacci ssu B^r S^e B^m (> kaccim ssu) (also 1079).
1048 paroparāni B^r S^e T B^{aim} (> parovarāni) (also ad 1148).
1051 pajānaṃ B^r S^e T (> hi pānaṃ).
1052 pucchāma B^r S^e T B^{at} (> °mi).
1059 abhijaññā B^r S^e T (> ābhi°).
1064 samīhāmi S^e (> gamissāmi).
1069 tareyyaṃ B^r S^e T (> tareyya).
1070 ratta-mah-ābhipassa B^r S^e B^{at} (> natta°).
1071 'dhimutto B^r S^e T B^l (> vi°).
1079 diṭṭha-sutena B^r S^e T (> diṭṭhe sutena).
yatā B^r S^e T [Pj.] (> yathā).
1081 te ca B^r S^e B^{am} (> sace).
1090 nirāsaṃso B^r S^e (> nirāsayo).

1091[b] na so B^r S^e (> na ca).
1110 āgamhā B^r S^e T (> āgamma).
1115 evaṃ etaṃ B^r S^e T B^{aim} (> evaṃ evaṃ).
1117 n' ābhijānāti B^r S^e T B^{aim} (> °mi).
1122 disā S^e T B^{aim} (> disatā).
asutaṃ amutaṃ B^r S^e T B^{ai} (> asutamutaṃ)
kiñci n' atthi S^{ep} (> kiñcanaṃ atthi).
Ps. solasannaṃ B^r S^e T (> °ānaṃ).
paricārika B^r S^e B^{aim} (> °aka).
1127 yathā-tathaṃ B^r S^e T (yathā tathāṃ).
1131 nāgo B^r S^e T B^{ai} (> nātho).
1145 upallaviṃ B^r S^e T B^{am} [B^{i}] (> upaplaviṃ).
36 bhavanti snehā S^e T B^{aim} (> bhavati sneho).
39 abandho S^e T B^{ai} (> abaddho).
44 sañchinna T B^{im} (> saṃsīna).
48 yantāni S^e T (> mānāni).
59 khiḍḍā-ratī S^e T B^{ai} (> khiddaṃ ratiṃ).
61 gaṇḍo S^e T B^{am} [B^{i}] (> galo).
62 sandālayitvāna S^e T B^{aim} (> °itvā).
67 somanassa-domanassaṃ S^e T B^{aim} (> somana-d°).

4. C.N. MSS. and Sn. MSS.

With all evidence in vv. ll. (see preceding chapter), in typographical and phonological features, there appears a very intimate relationship between S^e and B^{ai} (more towards B^a) and between B^r and B^{ai} (nearer to B^i). A definite decision on the grounds of our material is hardly possible. Moreover, the relation between S^e and B^r is so close as to suggest in many cases an almost simultaneous copying from a common source[1].

On the other hand, there are enough discrepancies between

[1] vv. ll. as common and peculiar to B^r S^e are:—
988 muddhāvipāta.
1015 tasmiṃ (> tamhi).
1069 tareyyaṃ.
1086 nibbānaṃ-padaṃ.
1092, 1093 parasmiṃ (> sarasmiṃ).
1120 Piṅgayo (> Piṅgiyo).

the two as to safeguard us against such an assumption[1]. All we can say is, that they are not far distant either in time or lineage.

Comparing C.N. MSS. with the available evidence of S.N. MSS., we may hypothetically construct the following table as regards their mutual relation[2]:—

1125 Bhadrāvudho ca.

1145 adassāmi (> addassāsi).

Other mistakes in common are:—

Both leave out "atāri so" 1060 Nidd.

Both leave out first four words in pahīna=(ad natthi) in 1088 Nidd.

Both leave out vacī duccaritaṃ ad kukkucca in 1106 Nid.

Both leave aññāvimokkhaṃ unexplained ad 1105, while T (wrongly) explains this in full as ad 1107.

See further vv. ll. ad Pu. 995, 1016, 1019, 1023, 1077, and Nidd, ad āgamaṃ, vimutta, sara.

[1] I only mention the following: Ad "sato" Nidd. Br has vedanā-citte-dhammesa anupassanā, Sc vedanī-anupassanī citte-anu° dhammesu-anu°. The insertion of pe (pa) in Br is often different from Sc; Br sometimes has "pa" instead of full quotation (e.g. ad āsiṃsamānā), sometimes full text where Sc has "pe" (e.g. ad vedagu). Other discrepancies see ad loc. cit.

[2] Mr. Helmer Smith confirms my opinion on this point by saying that Ck goes back to a Bu original which closely

That a very close resemblence exists between B^r S^c and B^{a1} is, apart from the vv. ll. common to both branches, also seen from their linguistic character (c. 5), and from the correspondence in the titles of the Pucchās (c. 6). S^c goes back to a direct (Singhalese) copy from B^a, which was unfamiliar with ṇ, a fact which explains why, in 1034 S^{cp}, we find this ṇ substituted from a B copy, because this passage was missing in B^a. That B^r, on the other hand, stands in direct relation to B^1 is shown by the omission of 1045 $^{a-b}$ in B^1 as well as in B^{rp};—cp. v. l. 1021 B^r B^1 kaṅkhacchida for taṇha°.

5. Phonology of C.N. MSS.

Of vv. ll. only such differences in the form of words are registered in this edition which prove a variance beyond a purely local, casual, and graphical character.

A short survey of the general phonological status of B^r and S^c (T contributes less, because based not on MS., but on a printed edition, and its divergencies are to a large extent due to mistakes of the transcriber) will be a substitute for marking each difference of spelling ad loc cit. (The sigla in brackets (B^{a1}, etc.) refer to Sn. readings.)

A. Reduction of Long Vowels.

ā to ă, medial: most marked in B^r, especially before m, n, r; very little in S^c.

ī > i, final: in endings nī, yī, rī, vī: in B^r S^c T (~B^{a1} C^b), cp. c. 3A.

medial: most marked in B^r and T, especially before t, n, m, with gemination and in ending īya; then in S^c (~B^{a1} C^b).

---

resembles B^a, and of which the first side-branch is represented by B^m, whereas B^1 is a later branch. He also corroborates my statement regarding S^c, also applicable to C^b, which latter "belongs to a class of S MSS. which is inferior and unreliable."

ū > u, final: in ending gū, in n. sg. ū, and in ahū: in B^r S^c (~B^l C^{kb}), cp. c. 3A.
medial: most marked in B^r, especially before t, p, m with gemination; next in (B^{al} C^b); in S^c only before m, l.

B. Substitution of Long Vowels.

ā for a, medial: most marked in B^r, next in S^c.
> am (and vice versa): S^c only (~ C^b).
ī > i, medial: S^c (~ C^b).
> im (and vice versa): S^c only.
ū > u: cases rare.

C. Vowel-Mutation.

i for a (and vice versa): most marked in T, especially before n; less in B^r S^c.
im > am: T S^c.
°ika > °aka: B^r S^c (~ B^{aim}).
i > u: T only (graphical).
a > u (and vice versa): frequent in S^c (~ C^b) and T, less B^r. e > a: B^r T (cp. c. 2, 3b).

D. Anusvāra.

Dropping of — (after a and i): most frequent in S^c, then (B^{al}), B^r; next (C^b).
Adding of — (to a and u): S^c (B^l C^b), not in B^r.
Substitution of —: see B.

E. Consonant-System.

To illustrate the most pronounced features peculiar to B^r and S^c, I give the following table, which is an analysis of the consonantal variances in the first half of C.N. It is left undecided whether these variances are purely phonetic in character or sometimes only graphical, and the stating of a case includes also the vice-versa substitution, which amounts to about 25-30 per cent. of the first.

I. Principal Cases.

	Sc	Br
1. Aspirate for Mute (kh > k, gh > g, ch > c, dh > d, ph > p, b)	18	18
2. Dental Surd for Guttural Mute (t > k, g) ..	20	5
3. Dental Surd for Guttural and Labial Aste (t > bh, h)	—	17
4. Dental Surd for Dental Sonant (t > d, dh; tt > tth)	5	50
5. Labial Surd for Labial Sonant (p > b, bh; pp > bb)	—	19.
6. p for m	15	24
7. p for s	36	3
8. y for s	18	10
y for ss	16	2
9. y for h	1	8
10. r for d	15	1
11. v for p	5	16
12. Gemination (dd, cc, pp > d, c, p)	7	5

II. Secondary Cases, restricted to one of the two MSS.

Sc:		Br:
p > c	15	y > gh	2
y > dh	4	y > r	4
v > r	5	v > t	4
h > g	3	s > t	7
h > p	3	ṭh > ṭṭh	frequent.

Note.—T has the following most frequent (graphical) deviations:—

k for th	th for bh (and vice versa).
g for t	d for h (and vice versa).
j for kh	l for s (and vice versa).

Other individual peculiarities of our three MSS. are:

T	Sc	Br
vuttañ h' etaṃ
phusati	p(h)assati
uppatti } upapatti }	uppatti	upapatti.
	jīvitaṃ kappesi

6. The Titles of the Pucchās.

The striking variations in the titles of the sixteen Pucchās seem in their similarity as well as dissimilarity to suggest some arrangement other than that which enumerates them simply as Pucchā 1, 2, etc., as is done in T. An analysis of their mutual relations proves difficult, but makes it conclusive to a certain extent that groups of Pucchās existed separately before they were set into the present arrangement, or were taken out of their present setting because they were greater favourites than others. The latter is clearly the case with No. 1 (Ajita-sutta).

1. The titles in the Text (of C.N. and Sn.):—

At the conclusion of each Pucchā the title of it is given with :

(a) -māṇava in C^{k} throughout;
C^{b} throughout except in No. 3[1].
B^{r} throughout except in Nos. 3[1] and 4.
B^{a} only in Nos. 1 and 2.
B^{m} only in Nos. 8-16.

(b) -māṇavaka in S^{c} throughout, except in No. 3.
B^{l} throughout, except in No. 4.
B^{a} throughout, except in Nos. 1 and 2.
B^{m} only in Nos. 1-7.
B^{r} only in No. 4.
C^{b} only in No. 3.

These differences in the titles points to a peculiar position of Nos. 3 and 4, either of which may have formed the last one of a separate collection. Was the title of No. 3 missing in $*B^{II\,b}$, and that of No. 4 in $*B^{II\,c}$? And is the break after No. 7 in B^{m} merely due to the omission of annotating it by the editor of Sn. after No. 7? Although the closest relation exists between B^{r} and B^{l}, they disagree entirely in the matter of the titles. Were these inserted into B^1 after the separation of B^r? B^r agrees with S^c only in the titles of Nos. 3 and 4; No. 3 here occupies a special position in so far as both B^r S^c have Puṇṇaka-suttaṃ, different from all other MSS.

[1] In No. 3 (Puṇṇaka°) haplography through contact-dissimilation would account for the irregularity of °a and °aka, although this is not found in No. 5 (Dhotaka) and others.

2. The titles in the Commentary:—

To some extent this question receives light from a comparison of the titles in the explanatory part of C.N. T shows a uniform entitling throughout with (Ajita . . .) māṇavaka-pañhā-niddeso paṭhamo (dutiyo . . .).

In B^r and S^c they are given as follows:—

S^c.	B^r.
(1) Ajita-suttaṃ[1]	Ajita-sutta-niddeso samatto
(2) Tisso Metteyya-pañhaṃ	T-M.-pañhā-niddeso samatto
(3) [Puṇṇaka-suttaṃ] [om.]	Puṇṇaka-sutta-niddeso samatto
(4) (both:) Mettayu-pañhaṃ catutthaṃ samattaṃ and so forth, agreeing for 7-16 with the exception of No. 11, where B^r has Jatukaṇṇi against S^c °ika. Here also we find a break after No. 3, and it is to be noticed that after No. 5 the numeration ceases. Was there a special collection of Pucchās 1-5?

3. The arrangement of *S^cA:—

Lastly, we may find an indication of separate collections in the arrangement of Text and Commentary in *S^cA (see table in Appendix 3). This MS. gives Pucchās 1-3 on leaves 1-3, Nos. 4-6 on leaf 4; and in the Niddesa finishes the exposition of No. 3 with leaf 18, of No. 5 with leaf 42, and of No. 16, first part (end of Pucchās), with leaf 78. Unless these divisions were mere coincidences we would have to state a break after No. 3 as well as after No. 5, and thus have another hint about separate collections of 1-3 and 1-5.

[1] This is also the title for each Pucchā in Pj.

7. Character of the Niddesa.

§ 1. The Niddesa or Exposition consists chiefly in the interpretation of each word. This interpretation is repeated at every place where the word is found in the Text, and is literally the same all through. Very seldom a paraphrase of a sentence or part of a sentence is given (e.g. v. 72), and in some cases a quotation from Canonical Books ("vuttam h' etam Bhagavatā") takes the place of an explanation (e.g. v. 54); but the rule is, that, once the words are made clear, the stanza is "exposed." This stereotype plan, which is rigorously adhered to in the whole of the C.N., may be illustrated with the first stanza of the Pucchās (v. 1032), which will serve as a model for all the rest. (See § 3.)[1]

§ 2. The whole Text of the Pārāyana-vagga precedes the exposition of the Pucchās in B[r] S[c], whereas T only gives the Vatthu-gāthās as a separate piece of introduction. The Text of the Khaggavisāṇa-sutta is found in the exposition only. As regards Pār. V., I have followed the example of T in printing separately the Vatthugāthās only. After every explanation, be it of a word, line, or stanza, the explained passage is repeated as an "iti" statement in full. Further, each Suttanta has the same typical conclusion (see text of this at end of c. 7).

§ 3. I here give the full text of stanza 1032 Sn., with its exposition in C.N., and indications as to the methodological treatment of these expositions in this edition.

Immediately after this follows text of the next stanza in full. In statement ten' āha the person is introduced either as brāhmaṇo (in Pucchās 1-16[I]), or Bhagavā (in Pārāyana-vagga answers), or Piṅgiya-thero (in P. No. 16[II]), or paccekasambuddho (in Khaggavisāṇa-sutta).

8. Methodological and Typographical Remarks.

I. Summarizing the method of my arrangement of the expositional matter of C.N., I have to remark the following:—

(a) To lessen the amount of repetitions I have marked each Sn. word, which is explained, with a number, referring to its place in the alphabetical index of all these (700) words in C.N. Other Sn. text-words, falling either under the heading of one of the 700 words, or standing isolated as not explained, are inserted into the Exposition-Index unnumbered and only marked with the number of the Sn. verse. Within this latter category the words of the Vatthugāthās are distinguished by an asterisk, and words which belong to C.N. only and with their retinue of synonyms are expositions κατ' ἐξοχήν, building-material, so to speak, are marked with N at the margin.

(b) Where no divergence exists from the ordinary scheme of C.N. exposition (see c. 7, § 3), this is to be understood for all stanzas. Only when an extension of this scheme is found, this is indicated in the exposition below the text-matter by

[1] bhante after me sometimes.

[2] asmim B[r] asmi T. The sentence [ ][a] and the two words [ ][b] are in conclusion of No. 16 replaced by "saha dhamma*-cakkhussa-paṭilābhā."

* Om. T.

noting the extension under the heading of the corresponding Pada of the text. Where two Padas are taken together as the argumentum exponendum, this is shown by giving the line-indices of the Padas combined (a+b).

(c) Whenever text- or catch-words are bracketed in [ ], this means that this word is either explained at a parallel passage, or paraphrased, or not explained at all. Under the index-scheme those words which are never explained (like aham, imaṃ, asmi) are easily recognized as not numbered; and a study of these self-evident words would throw some light on the psychology of Eastern commentation.

(d) (Brackets) within the explanatory matter:—

(na) means that the word is not explained by itself, but inserted again into the explanatory context before each of the constituents of the explanation.

(*nivuto) means either that this text-word figures as a catch-word in the Explanation-Index, although it does not head a synonymical progression—which is the usual case in all prepositional compounds, as (*visuddha), for which "suddha" introduces the explanation—, or that it has to be supplemented from the context, or that it is translated in the quotation, meaning by this, that its prose-form is substituted for its poetical form (as *sutvāna is represented in explanatory quotation by sutvā, *care by careyya, etc.)[1].

(e) The combination of two words by means of + (as "visame+nivitṭha") means, that their respective explanations are given jointly without being separated by "ti" and repeated quotation, i.e. visame nivitṭhan ti (v. 57) visame kāya-kamme nivitthaṃ visame vacī-kamme nivitthaṃ . . . visamesu pañcasu kāma-guṇesu nivitṭhaṃ sattaṃ allīnaṃ . . .

[1] Other poetical forms and their prose substitutes are, e.g.— anāsavāse dhammāse brāhmaṇāse	°ā.	caraṃ pajānaṃ sikkhe	°anto.

etad tad	°ṃ.	titṭhe tare	°eyya.	atārum upāgañchum pakkāmuṃ	°iṃsu.
tejasā · tejena. jarasā · jarāya.		labhetha bhajetha	°eyya.

II. Typographical: 1. On the writing of Anusvāra.—In accordance with the pronounced B character of C.N. I have also adopted the B^{r} treatment of ṃ, which at the same time provides a more uniform and stricter linguistic appearance of the text. Thus I print the nasal with the corresponding mute in every peculiar combination. I keep ṃ only before labials and y, v, s, h, and in compounds of nasal+mute in which the compositional character of the combination is still felt as such, i.e. proved by the separate existence of either component or by the antithesis of a similar compound (kiṃ kāraṇā~taṃ kāraṇā, cp. taṃ hetu; pāraṃ gato~pāraṃ patto). I write ṃy except in the t.t. saññojana which always occurs in this spelling.

2. Compound Words.—As regards the treatment of noun-compounds, I have, in keeping with the purpose of a Niddesa, applied the principle of separation more freely than is usually done. Compositions with monosyllables I have written with elision rather than contraction, so treating them either as proclitic or enclitic according to the emphasis put upon them in the syntax of the sentence: mā 'hu, mā 'kāsi, et' ābhinandāmi. This way of spelling seems to me preferable to contraction, since the latter, especially with a, is not always the case; e.g. hand' āhaṃ is to be grouped with sādhū ti which is based on the enclitic (accentual) principle only. Cp. kiñc' āpi, c' āhaṃ, khv' āhaṃ for kiñcâpi, câhaṃ, khvâhaṃ.

The treatment of enclitics may be condensed into the following rules:—

(a) In combination of non-enclitic and enclitic:
  (1) A short non-enclitic (paroxytonon) is reduced and the enclitic accented: kiñc' āpi.
  (2) A long non-enclitic (properispomenon) receives the accent of the enclitic: sādhū ti; manasā 'nāvilo.

(b) In combination of enclitic and enclitic the first one receives the accent of the second: cā pi; nā ti.

(c) In combination of proclitic and non-enclitic the nonenclitic receives the accent of the proclitic: c' āham; n' āham.

(d) In combination of two non-enclitics ending and beginning with equal vowel, whichever final or initial syllable is long, receives the accent: etā 'bhinandāmi. If both are short, the first one is elided and the second lengthened: pun' āpare (for punâpare).

3. Abbreviations.—As regards abbreviations of the canonical books, I have adopted the scheme proposed in JPTS, 1909, p. 385 sq., to which I refer the reader. Jā is replaced by J. Other isolated abbreviations are as follows:—

p = Text-reading of the Pucchās (S^p B^p).
n = Commentary-reading (S^n B^n).
Pj = Paramattha-jotikā II. (Commentary on Sn., pt. II).
Ps = Prose part between Sn. 1123 and 1124.
S^cA = S^c Archetype.
x = (in pahāna =) means that this word is the catch-word of a stereotype or "pe" sequence ("synonymical progression") which is to be found under this heading.
"ad" means that this explanation serves also as explanation of x.
"see" means that explanation of x is to be taken as explanation also for this word. Both this and the preceding are joined under id. p. ("identical passages").
~ = similar to, or similarly, correspondingly.
upa°: in prepositional compounds the abbreviated preposition refers to the whole of the immediately preceding combination, e.g. nissaya upa°=nissaya upanissaya.
: = i.e.
id. p. = identical passages.

Culla Niddesa.

[1] sic B[r] S[cp] T. (B[aim]); parovarāni S[cn] Sn. Pj.—It can hardly be decided which is the correct form, since neither is free from analogy-influence. The compound is para+avara, but by analogy of confusion between ava (o)>apa, this apa is substituted for ava (o) in derivation avara (ora) under the influence of the first para; thus para+{apa / ava (o)}-ra which branches into {par-o-para / par-o-vara} instead of yielding *par-ora.

* Note on conclusion:

Under No. 74 of his catalogue of the Mandalay MSS. in the India Office Library (JPTS. 1896, p. 26), Fausböll describes the C.N. MS. Its conclusion combines parts of that of Sᶜ and that of T—viz., "Catuttho vaggo; niṭṭhito ca sabbaso Kh°"; follows the 16 brāhmaṇas, as Sn. 1124, 1125, with different spellings of: Upasaṃvo (Upasivo), Catukaṇṇi (Jatu°), Posīlo (Posālo), Singiyo (Pingiyo). After this the Udāna of T: solasannam, etc. up to sulikkhitā; then: niṭṭhitā Mahāniddesadesanā. Laṅkadīpa . . . (30 lines in Burmese).
